The Pierpont Morgan's collection of Drawings is being digitized and made available to the public. The Morgan Library & Museum announced that it will begin the digitization of its collection of master drawings, considered to be one of the greatest in the world. The initiative will result in a digital library of more than 10,000 images, representing drawings spanning the fourteenth to twenty-first centuries, available free of charge on the Morgan's website (<http://themorgan.org/>). The project will begin in October and is expected to be completed within one year, contributing significantly to the Morgan's commitment to advancing drawings scholarship.
