Recommended Current Periodical Readings:

Selected and Annotated by: Patrick Riley, Syr. Arch'22

This month's selection is Patrick's last contribution to the SAH Booklist and Reader's Advisory. As you can see below, Patrick just graduated from Syracuse University. This section of the Booklist will resume in the fall when another student will assume this responsibility. Joining me in wishing Patrick "Good Luck".

Patrick Riley

"I intend to work at an architecture design firm's research department on the west coast. It has been a pleasure to become immersed in architecture at Syracuse and I hope to make a career engaged in architectural research and representations."

Anderson, Elijah. "The Perpetual Stranger". Harvard Design Magazine. Issue 49 (Fall/Winter 2021). p.32-37.

"The civil rights movement opened its gates, and a new Black middle class emerged. But the new form of symbolic racism emanating from the iconic ghetto hovers, stigmatizing by degrees Black people as they navigate the larger civil society and, especially, by the “white space” (37).

Effiom, Ewa. “The Current Class”. AA: L’Architecture D’Aujourd’Hui. Issue 447 (Feb.-Mar. 2022). p.48-52.

“The current generation of architects, occasionally dubbed the Crisis Generation, is defined by its break from the apathy and technoscepticism afforded to its predecessors. This period is also characterised by the pace at which the world is changing; Moore’s Law and capitalism unite to create ever greater complexities” (49).

Foges, Chris. “Our Space”. The RIBA Journal. Vol. 129, Issue 3 (Mar. 2022). p.16-20.

“Learning from The Hithe might inform a new generation of durable, portable buildings for medium-term use, and prompt broader questions about how they should be better accommodated by regulation” (20).

Furiassi, Fabrizio. “Mafia Matters”. Log. Issue 53 (Fall 2021). p.117-122.

“Architectural critics and historians may have long overlooked the Mafia’s impact on the Italian built environment, but studying the impacts of the spaces that the Mafia produced could shed new light on the roles not only of architects but of all actors in the making of a space” (122).

Giorgi, Emilia. “A Laboratory of Unexpected Nature”. Log. Issue 53 (Fall 2021). p.144-150.

“Imbriaco’s suspended and surreal images testify to a way of living that is hard to image in an urban context such as Rome. A way of living that comes from necessity and, at the same time, from conviction, which rediscovers a meditative, slow time, and finds refuge and protection in nature, among fireflies, plants, wild animals, pollen as decoration for the hair” (145).

Holder, Andrew. “Forever After or, the Work of Architecture in the Age of Its Chronological Superfluity”. Praxis. Issue 15. p.111-123.

“I would instead like to offer a guide for the production of work under the present conditions, where it seems a question of available models. What kinds of work can we do after the work has already been done?...Answering these questions requires abandoning the messianic expectation of a future after after in favor of mustering enthusiasm for a present that may last forever” (111).

Howard, Annie. “The Matrix Feminist Design Co-Operative Was Ahead of Its Time”. Architect: The AIA Journal. Vol. 111, Issue 2 (Mar. 2022). p.38-40.

“As these students’ experiences suggest, Making Space contains an enduring relevance that still captures the need for a feminist understanding of space today. It’s a work that has impacted several generations of architects, urban planners, and feminist who want to transform their surroundings” (38).

King, Aaron. "The Year of the Superstudio". Landscape Architecture Magazine. Vol. 112, Issue 4 (Apr. 2022). p.94-117.

"Board members had also considered another idea: a multi-institution studio that responded to the Green New Deal legislation. Fleming, Weller, and Orff had overseen successful Green New Deal-related studios at their respective universities. But the breadth of the legislation and its issues had challenged them" (96).

Putalik, Erin and Erica Schapiro-Sakashita. "A Melt-Blown Moment: Pandemics, Wildfires, and the New Exactitude of the Architectural Filter". Journal of Architectural Education. Vol. 76, Issue 1 (Spring 2022). p.118-126.

"Filters for both the body (N95) and for buildings (MERV-13 or greater) have gained unprecedented public interest during the past two years. This essay examines some of the historical periods in which respiration and filtration were driving concepts in architecture, and considers the degree to which future architecture might be mandated to respond to the public's newfound exactitude of air awareness" (118).

Rafson, Sarah. "Ropes and Rules: Performance and Process in Bernard Tschumi's Advertisements for Architecture". Praxis. Issue 15. p.7-14.

"Each Advertisement addressed a different architectural polemic. Tschumi's slogans countered genteel notions of architecture by glorifying decay, rot, irrationality, eroticism, restraints, and the superficiality of building. In doing so, the Advertisements reflect an ethos of questioning and provocation that took hold post-1968, one "that doesn't necessarily exist today," Tschumi recently stated" (8).

Sanchez, Kelly Vencill. "Conversation: Ed Warner". Dwell. (Mar.-April 2022). p.42-44.

"So the duo began collaborating with some of the world's largest manufacturers to create their own line of inclusive fittings meant to be as attractive as they are functional. We caught up with Warner, who was named the U.K.'s disability and access ambassador for the built environment in 2019, to discuss why accessibility matters and what still needs to change" (42).

Singley, Paulette. "Table Talk". Log. Issue 53 (Fall 2021). p.151-168.

"Art museums whet our appetites with their inedible contents. That cafes are appended to them is neither coincidence nor convenience. The proximity between fine art and haute cuisine can be traced to the classical genre of rhopography, which became nature morte, or still life painting, and the depiction of foodstuffs as objects in a field that operate compositionally rather than nutritionally" (151).

Stead, Naomi, Maryam Gusheh, and Julia Rodwell. "Well-Being in Architectural Education: Theory-Building, Reflexive Methodology, and the 'Hidden Curriculum'".

Journal of Architectural Education. Vol. 76, Issue 1 (Spring 2022). p.85-97.

“Research addressing the relationship between health and architecture has frequently focused on what architects produce – the spaces, infrastructures, and buildings that result from their work – and the efforts these have on the health of their various publics and occupants” (85).

Way, Thaisa. “Who Is the Public for Whom We Design? And Who Are We to Design For Such a Public?”. Harvard Design Magazine. Issue 49 (Fall/Winter 2021). p.138-143.

“Landscape architects stand at the precipice of a new vision of the built environment as foundational to democracy. But they must pay close attention to who the public is and might be and in turn, who should design the laces that will steward that broad vision of the public” (143).
