Articles & Segments

This month's selections have been chosen and annotated by Yun(Sally) Jiang, a sophomore in the School of Architecture at Syracuse University.

Yun(Sally) Jiang

"I started to work at King and King Architecture Library in May 2022 and will be a sophomore architecture student at Syracuse University in fall 2022. I will be selecting the periodical articles beginning June 2022. I look forward to my fall semester learning more about architecture and helping at the library. Hope you enjoy this month's selections!"

Chan, TF. "Ring Cycle". Wallpaper. (October 2022). p.124-127.

"The Donum Estate, a 200-acre winery nestled between California's Napa and Sonoma counties, ranks among the world's top destinations for outdoor sculpture. Its enviable holdings include a dozen bronze Zodiac Heads by Ai Weiwei, an apparently abandoned lead warplane by Anselm Kiefer, a giant pumpkin by Yayoi Kusama, and a stainless-steel banyan tree sprouting dishes and pots by Subodh Gupta. But when Olafur Eliasson accepted an invitation from owners Mei and Allan Warburg to visit Donum three years ago, he wanted to contribute a piece of architecture rather than a sculpture" (125).

Davis, Brody, Bond et al. "Smithsonian National Museum of African American History and Culture". AV Monografias. (Issue 245, 2022). p.42-51.

"The Mustuwis new building- the outcome of an international competition - is on grand Constitution Avenue, a main axis of the United States capital, close to the Smithsonian National Museum of American History and Culture and the Washington Monument. The project pursued a recognizable image through a design of three cornerstones: an inverted ziggurat shape evoking a crown, an opening toward the immediately landscape, and a filigree envelope" (42).

Harder, Jeff. "Georgian Revival revisited". Clem Labine's Traditional Building. (October 2022). p.38-43.

"Glancing at the original buildings on the campus of the Loomis Chaffee School means taking in the hallmarks of Georgian Revival architecture: gambrel roofs, dormer windows, red brick, and limestone. But digging deeper into the history of the Windsor, Connecticut, boarding school means understanding that these architectural choices are manifestations of civic pride and social obligation values inspired by the early years of the American experiment and essential to the school's identity" (39).

Koberl, Rainer & Daniela Kross. "Tyrol Alpine Ibex Centre in Pitztal". Detail. (September 2022). p.40-43.

"One of the largest ibex herds of the Eastern Alps can be found in the Pitztal valley in Tyrol. The municipality of Sankt Leonhard dedicated an exhibition and education centre to these majestic beasts, not far from their natural environment. Next to the listed historic building of the Schrofenhof, one of the oldest farm structures in the valley, a tower made of concrete was created that is visible from afar, ascending from a clearing encircled by dense forests" (41).

Kucharek, Jan-Carlos. "Sitting Pretty". The RIBA Journal. (September 2022). p.34-40.

" Mae put thought into the sequencing of the building, with other spaces - such as a courtyard garden at the entrance - revealing themselves to users before they embark on their journey through the building, and at every 'crank' of the spine you will either enter a pavilion or be gifted a view out to the landscape through the glulam colonnade. On their journey residents will pass a GP health centre, a reception lounge, shop, welfare office and hairdresser, art room, restaurant and social hall” (39).

Lockard, Mijana. “A Child of The Sun”. Frank Lloyd Wright Quarterly. (Fall, 2022, Vol.33, No.3). p14-19.

“In this progressive learning environment, students are challenged to authentically apply their intellectual knowledge. School of Education students hone the art and science of teaching at the on-campus Laboratory School. Undergraduates work alongside their professors on original research. Academic majors are connected through interdisciplinary learning and civic engagement projects. Before graduation, nearly all undergraduates participate in meaningful internships. The College's progressivist learning perspective is deeply rooted in history and in the unique hardscape inspired by Frank Lloyd Wright's idea of harmony between the architecture and its environment” (15).

Rao, Anjulie. “Who Cares”. Architect. (September 2022). p.64-75.

“The slow dissolving of our built structures, ever-more expedited by climate change, has yielded full-throated responses from big tech: crumbling bridges and roadways spurring new AI-monitoring schemes and concrete sensors to measure deterioration; public transit that won't seem to resume its pre-pandemic regularity being met with Elon Musk's subterranean private vehicle "alternatives"; data-crunching tools that predict rat infestations” (66).

Richardson Ruth-Anne. “Life Support”. Metropolis. (September/October, 2022). p.96-108.

“The facility's earthen building envelope comprises stabilized compressed earth blocks (CEBs) that are locally sourced, prefabricated, and arranged in an interlocking pattern. (Other efficient components of the construction system include modular roof truss systems and interlocking roofing sheets.) The exposed, weather-resistant blocks-adding to the healing natural aesthetic while being inherently sustainable-will also function as the hospital's primary external finish, complemented by a natural interior color palette. The project's other sustainability strategies include passive ventilation, locally sourced materials, thermal mass, and insulated roofing systems” (100).

Robertson, Cooper. “Studio Museum en Harlem”. AV Monografias. (Issue 245, 2022). p.90-91.

“One of the fundamental aims of the project is to open up the institution to the community. Access from the street is through a large stepped hall that recalls the interiors of nearby churches and forms a public space which invites one to take the exhibition route. The different galleries are made to be adaptable to the ever-changing contemporary art scene, and able to take in works of different scales and techniques. In addition, the galleries will be linked to the area reserved for artists' studios and educational facilities, forging dialogue between viewing and creating art" (90).

Sisson, Patrick. "Rebalancing Act". Landscape Architecture Magazine. (October, 2022). p26-28.

"Over the past five years, the challenges of converting a former industrial waterfront to a recreational destination have become more acute with extreme weather fueling erratic rivers and flooding. In Woodfin, North Carolina, just outside Asheville, a greenway and riverfront park project required a delicate balance between resilience and amenities, says David Tuch, a landscape architect and president at Asheville-based Equinox" (26).

Swalling, Sheila. "Downsizing in Place". Fine Homebuilding. (October 2022). p.54-57.

"When I begin to design a new home, I try to rid myself of any preconceived ideas and let the process unfold naturally. Never knowing what the end results will be is one of the joys of being an architect. This way, the solutions emerge as a true response to the site, the local culture, and the client's needs" (54).

Zacks, Stephen. "The Recenter Reimagined". Metropolis. (September/October, 2022). p.88-95.

"The decision for cities to invest in new facilities that nurture public health and well-being should be intuitive: The benefits of physical activity for educational outcomes and the prevention of illness have been well established by the scientific community for more than a century. But local spending on such resources has been steadily falling, while private fitness has become a $30 billion industry in the United States, essentially filling this void. Luxury fitness clubs like Equinox and pricey training classes like SoulCycle have exploded, while corporate offices have begun to push fitness amenities and the rhetoric of well-being to attract workers back to the office" (90).
